Hahn said: "There's cyanide of potassium; it's sometimes used, it's very strong and is a deadly poison."

Then, complying with Richeson's request Habn put some cyanide in a small viai, saying: "There is enough to kill three or four dogs. Be very careful of this, Don't throw the bottle around loose when you get through with it.

Richeson took the vial and looked at its contents, and then said to Hain: "Put in three or four more chunks, will you."

Hahn did as requested. Richeson then took the bottle and said: "This may seem mysterious. Can you keep a secret? I haven't bought this. It's dangerous stuff. Can you keep a secret? "Hahn agreed to keep the secret. Then Richeson said: "Be sure to come to my wedding." After which he left the store.

The next day Hahn zet an invitation to the wedding of Richeson and Miss Edmands.

It was this story, related early this morning to Chief Inspector Joseph Dugan of the Boston police by an attorney whom Hahn had retained, that sent the police off with the purpose of immediately arresting Mr. Richeson.

As told by Superintendent Watts in an official statement, the story of the arrest
